New thinking on the theory and practice of development

Are you interested in developing countries? Do you want to keep up with theoretical debates about development but haven't time to read the scholarly journals? Do you want to find out where theory and policy meet? The IDS Bulletin is a unique source of information for those interested in the Third World and its problems — because each issue deals with a particular theme, it provides an entry to current debates — because the articles are written by people who are involved in both theory and practice, it combines both perspectives.

Recent issues cover:

Research on rural women; Developmental states in East Asia; UNCTAD: the first twenty years; Educational research; Restructuring in the 1980s; The Western Hemisphere in the World Crisis; sub-Saharan Africa, and Disarmament and Development.
